

Planning to Teach

Weekly Report 27 ~4/1/2019 - 4/7/2019

This week in the Independent Study and Mentorship program, great strides were made in understanding how students learn. This will be very beneficial in the future as the second part of the final product is worked on through individualized lessons with students.

With this knowledge, lesson plans will be able to be adjusted to fit the different learning styles of the students being worked with. This will, in turn, result in more effective and beneficial lessons for the students. This also challenges myself as a teacher to find different ways to teach the same topic to students who process information different ways.

Additionally, this week the digital portfolio was updated in preparation for everything that has to be done before final presentation night. After this was completed, time was spent finding a room to use for final presentation night and the paperwork was completed to use this room. Staying ahead of some deadlines that are approaching in the future will be helpful later on when many things are piling up in the last couple weeks before final presentation night. Hopefully this will make those weeks less stressful and packed full of things to do.
